Communication is the inheritor of a long and honored tradition. Since the ancient Greeks, the study of rhetoric (the art of effective discourse) has been recognized as a key element of humane learning. It formed one of the seven liberal arts of education in medieval Europe. Modern communication curricula provide students with a comprehensive knowledge of the nature of human communication, the symbol system by which it occurs, its media, and its effects. As a field of study, the department contributes to a liberal education and provides basic preparation for either graduate study or careers in communication. Employment opportunities exist in organizational and industrial institutions, public relations and advertising agencies, the mass media, and civil and social agencies.

The communication major has three concentration areas: communication studies, media studies, and corporate communication.

NOTE: All grades in communication courses will count toward a student's GPA in the major. Grades in other courses that are not a part of a student's declared track will not count toward that student's major GPA.

NOTE: Beginning with majors declared on August 15, 2001 or later, majors must complete COMM 210 within the first 15 hours of communication course work.

Major Requirements: 36 hours (except 39 hours for corporate concentration)
