

Epilogue

Dear friend. You are almost ready to close this volume and put it on a shelf or return it to the College Bookstore, or...

Please do not hurry to make your final decision.

I hope that this volume was your partner during a semester of challenging Physics. It was designed to help you make your notes during the lectures, which I hope you enjoyed very much. I am sure that this book helped you a great deal by preventing of the necessity copying everything from the board and giving you the opportunity to concentrate on the teacher's words and thoughts.

You were closely involved in the teaching- learning process by making your notes in the margins of this book.

You helped me find misprints during the semester of our collaboration and I will appreciate your final list of misprints so I will be able to fix the next edition of this book.

In some sense you have now become a co-author.

Aren't you keeping this volume for your memories?
